Ban Johnson Comes to Aid Of Two 'Orphan Colonels'

Exact Terms Owners of Giants May Propose Not Known Yet, but They Are Expected To Be Reasonable; Ruth Will Be in Uniform To-day

By W. O. McGeehan

The Yankees will not be evicted from the Polo Grounds at the end of the year, as their crool landlords, Messrs. Stoneham, McGraw and McQuade at first threatened. Ban Johnson, president of the American League, came to the rescue of the two orphans, Colonels Ruppert and Huston, just as the landlords were bouncing them off the front porch and preparing to heave their trunks down on top of them.

While the two orphans were wondering who would cover them up with leaves yesterday a messenger dashed into the offices of the Yanks. "It is all off," sobbed Colonel Ruppert. "The are sending a truck to move Babe Ruth." With trembling fingers the colonel tore open the envelope and this is what he read:

is what he read;
"In conference with Mr. Stoneham yesterday and he agrees to let you stay at the Polo Grounds. He will arrive in New York next week to ar range final terms."

Last Gun of Strife

The message was signed Byron Bancroft Johnson. "We are saved," the two colonels shouted as they staggered down the stairs. And there you are. It looks as though the last gun had been fired in the internal strife in organized baseball and that the doves might as well start in nesting in the affidavit cannons.

Just what terms Charles A. Stoneham has propose the colonels cannot guess.

but they are pretty confident that they will be reasonable enough. Ban Johnson came to the rescue of the Yankees as they were going down for the third time in the evictment seas, and he threw them a life preserver instead of an anchor.

he threw them a life preserver instead of an anchor.

It seems that among other things the late lamented Mays case started a lot of loose conversation. During the chatter there were a few threats about an abrogation of the national agreement and some wars that would cause organized baseball to do a more nervous shimmy than it did during the Federal League unpleasantness.

About that time the edict came from the Giant office that as soon as the Yanks worked out their current least they would be thrown right out into the suow and that their household goods would be spilled right out on top of them. In keeping with this announcement the crool landlerds of mouncement the crool landlords of Cleveland over Philadelphia for Cleveland over Philadelphia for Cleveland over Philadelphia for the Week's total of four base hits in the ultimatum that after this season the Yanks would not be permitted to cavort over the nicely manicured lawns at the Polo Grounds.

Colonel Grabs Shovel

Whereupon Colonel Tillinghast L. Hommedien Huston, vice-president of the Yanks and an engineer at heart, took off his coat and grasped his trusty shovel. The lust for building gleamed in his eyes and he called for bricks and mortar and cement and other toys that delight the soul of an engineer. that delight the soul of an engineer. But suddenly it seemed that the places for engineers to build in were scarce on the Island of Manhattan. The colonel had his shovel, but no room to In the meantime the Macedonian cry came up from the Yankee fans, "Who will save our orphans?"

"I will," Ban Johnson shouted. "I will save the two orphans from their crool landlords. They shall not be thrown into the raspherry bushes. I will save them." And he did.

The Yankee corps of physicians and surgeons visited convalescent row yesterday and brought back some more or less cheerful reports concerning the Yankee invalids.

Moran Stops Another

English Heavyweight

LONDON, May 21.—Frank Moran, of Pittsburgh, to-night knocked out Frank Goddard, the English heavyweight, in the second round of what was to have been a twenty-round bout. The fight took place in the Holborn Stadium.

The bout started with both men going at a fast pace. In the second round Goddard was floored twice for counts respectively of nine and eight, and then Moran landed a terrific right on the Englishman's jaw and he was counted out.

Leading to a New One

Come, gather round me, little ones, And give heed to my song; I may detain you quite a while, Or maybe not so long; I have no idea just now What I intend to say, And yet I feel the time is ripe To kick in with this lay.

There's nothing new on Speaker now, Moran or John McGraw; The Johnson boost is overplayed And should be stopped by law; The Babe Ruth punch is ancient stuff, Like jeering at the Reds, And panning magnates long ago Was good for big type heads.

So, little ones, you may disperse; I've had my little say; There may be something new to shoot, But not by me to-day; To-morrow? Well, perhaps by then We'll have a new, fresh crack-Some sprightly dope in which we'll moan For "Ty Cobb going back."

At the exact middle of May the Cleveland and St. Louis clubs of and the American League were batting .290, with Cincinnati and St. Louis of the National League at .284.

This being above the average, it is evident that ballplayers hit harder in the spring than later on, when pitchers unfurl their kinks. But on that same date the hard hitting Detroit club was registered at

Lefty Tyler Also Makes Good Showing on Mound; Robertson's Error Is Costly

Special Dispatch to The Tribune
CHICAGO, May 21.—Manager McGraw and his New York Giants wound up their four-game series with the Chicago Cubs here to-day with a close victory at 2 to 1. The game brought out a pitchers' battle between Fred Toney, of the invaders, and Lefty Tyler, with the Giant representative giving the more Impressive performance. Although defeated, Tyler showed Manager Mitchell of the Cubs that he was rapidly rounding to form. It was Tyler's first appearance in the box since the middle of April.

The Giants scored their winning run in the ninth inning after Tyler had tied matters in the eighth with a triple. Killefer's poor throw to catch Young napping at second in the opening inning gave the Giants their first run. Although the Giant batsmen nicked the local twirler for a total of ten hits it was not until the final frame that they could bunch their hits to record the winning tally.

Two triples were among the seven hlts gathered from the offerings of Toney, one of which was accounted for by Robertson, the former Giant outfielder. Toney was invincible in the pinches. Lear to reach home with the winning tally.

The Giants' run in the first was started on its way when Young singled. Killifer threw high to catch Young attempting to steal second and the runner reached third. The Cubs gathered three hits in the second but nary a run was the fruit therefrom, as Toney caught a runner off first. Barber singled and Robertson filed to Young. A snap throw from Toney caught Barber napping and he was run down. Deal and Terry singled in succession but Toney forced Killefer to fly out to Burns.

From here on Tyler and Toney settled down to a pitching duel. Toney held the local batters in check until the eighth, when Tyler drove a three bagger to center field and had barely caught his wind when Flack chased him home with a single to left.

The series proved a profitable one for the Giants, for they captured three of the four, losing only to Alexander, who, incidentally, thereby recorded his elighth straight victory. Immediately after the game the Giants left for St. Louis to play their last series of the Western trip before returning home.
